Какой-нибудь ?But that wasn't the case in LA, where former Daytime Emmy winners Cassie Steele and Rob Estes have struck gold. They created a world-class musical in "Smash" and have won the hearts of viewers with their fusing of classic musical theatre and modern pop hits. Although some say the show's format is flawed (they're currently no longer auditioning for Season 2 because of its six-week shoot, making it difficult to actually work on various songs), the two — and their fans, who are known as Smashalisters — haven't been deterred, it seems. And now, Steele and Estes say they're officially shooting the second season of the show. "We're doing the second season already," Steele told EW. "We've got six weeks of it. It's shooting in three cities — Atlanta, Boston and New York." She added that she and Estes are "so grateful" to be continuing their work on the show. "It's just such a great experience," she said. This is good news for "Smash" fans, as, to date, "Smash" has received negative reviews from critics — particularly "the show's haphazardly combined and often conflicting plot lines," as Slate's TV critic Willa Paskin wrote — but it's also good news for Steele and Estes. Steele said they're hoping they can be successful with the second season. "We've just been so fortunate," she said. "It's been f678ea9f9e
